Turks' Power In Europe Claimed To Be Tottering

That the entrance of Turkey into the European war game will result in changing the map of southeastern Europe there can be no doubt. If the allies are beaten Turkey will get back a part of the territory which she lost in the Balkan war. If the allies are victorious Turkey probably will be driven entirely from Europe, the Balkan states getting slices of European Turkey, and Constantinople becoming a Russian port. The accompanying map shows that part of the world which has been brought into the spotlight in a result of Turkey's war declaration.

MAIL CAR ROBBERY BALKED IN CHICAGO

Police Arrest Three Hold-Up Men Who Are Said to Be Responsible for a Series of Crimes.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—Hold-up of the United States mail car operating on Chicago's trolley line, was prevented today by the arrest of Frank M. Boyer, who the police say confessed, and two accomplices, Charles Andrews and Charles Stammer. Maps of West Madison street on which the mail car runs, were found in Boyer's possession, the police said. Notations also were found on the maps showing the part each of the three alleged hold-up men were to play. One was to "attend to the motorman, the second to get the registered mail and money, and third to 'get all the strays'." They had planned to encounter a motor car, Stammer and Andrews, according to the police, are automobile bandits and are held under bonds of $50,000 each for a series of 15 robberies.

GAZETTE PETITIONS GOVERNMENT TO LIFT QUARANTINE AT ONCE

CONGRESSMAN COOPER AND BU REAU OF ANIMAL INDUSTRY TRY URGED TO RELIEVE SITUATION.

PHILIPP CALLED UPON

Delegation of Rock County Farmers Visits Governor, Who Promises His Influence to Secure Immediate Action.

Letters directed to Congressman Cooper, to the bureau of animal industry, and the department of agriculture at Washington, asking for immediate action toward the removal of the stock quarantine now effective in Rock county and certain other portions of Wisconsin, were dispatched today by the Gazette Printing Company, which has interested itself in an effort to secure relief for the farmers of this region. The letters called attention to the fact that the disease had been stamped out so that the quarantines are known to exist, that the farmers are suffering heavy daily losses as a result of the quarantine, that auctions are barred, that stock for breeding purposes cannot be shipped in, and that the restrictions work a decided hardship on all farmers residing within the area plied under ban.

Twenty or more Rock county farmers called upon Governor E. L. Philipp at Madison Thursday afternoon to protest against the objectionable features of the quarantine imposed by the federal government for foot and mouth disease epidemic, and to secure Governor Philipp's assistance in securing an early lifting of the restrictive regulations. Attorneys M. G. Jeffris, Charles Pierce and John L. Fisher accompanied the delegation and presented the case for the government's consideration. It was claimed that the quarantines are a hardship on the farmers of Rock county, who are suffering losses of $1,000 a day as a result of the quarantine, which practically prevents all trade in livestock despite certain modifications in the quarantine order. It was pointed out that stock which is now shipped to outside markets, especially the Chicago stockyards, under the approval of an inspector, are recently provided with tags assigned to the quarantine pens and sold at prices averaging one dollar a hundred less than is paid for regular receipts. In addition to this, the quarantine is a hardship on the farmers of Rock county, who are suffering losses of $1,000 a day as a result of the quarantine, which practically prevents all trade in livestock despite certain modifications in the quarantine order.

There had been much speculation as to whether the Oltavi had been converted into an auxiliary cruiser, but it is likely that she was used by the German cruiser Karlsruhe as a supply ship.

THREE FRENCH SURGEONS CONFINE THEIR WORK TO CORRECTING DEFORMITIES.

(Correspondence Associated Press.)

Paris, Jan. 8.—French Army Medical Corps have set apart three eminent surgeons, Professors Tuffier, Morestin and Seblan, to make aesthetic repairs and remove deformations from the faces of those wounded in the war. If a man loses his nose or any part of his face, or a disfigurement is caused by a wound, the face will be repaired by skin grafting, and the latest discoveries in surgical science will be used to remedy the deformity. Several cases have already been successfully undertaken by these surgeons. A young corporal who had part of his face taken away by a shell was given a new nose, left jaw, and cheeks in cases where the face had been lost. It is said that successful efforts have been made to transplant others, according to a method discovered by a Russian dentist.

BRITISH BUGLER'S RUDE FAILS TO STOP CHARGE OF ALLIES' TRENCHES.

(Correspondence of The A. P.)

Berlin, Jan. 8.—An English bugler's mistake, due to the fact that his knowledge of the German army bugle calls was not quite perfect, frustrated a clever stratagem of the enemy in Flanders, according to a report of a German returned from the front on Saturday. At one point along the line the artillery had been preparing the ground for an assault, and the order was finally given for advance. The English bugler, who sadly misinterpreted the order, blew a charge call, which was taken for a retreat. The charge was resumed, and the Germans had taken the trenches at which they had been aiming.

AN ADVERTISEMENT THAT FAILED.

In New York City millions use the street cars and a large proportion ride on transfers.

Some one once conceived the idea of printing a daily advertisement on each transfer. The privilege was sold to a large advertiser for a great sum of money.

It was one of the biggest advertising failures ever recorded. The returns from the advertising were almost nothing. The store finds by spending the same amount of money in the newspapers it can increase its business from year to year at a most satisfactory ratio.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS LIKE LOVE STORIES THE BEST.

(Correspondence Associated Press.)
Austrian, Jan. 8.—"What kind of books shall we send to the hospitals?" was the question dispatched by a Berlin charitable organization to the head of one of the German field hospital divisions.

The answer came back promptly: "Whatever you send, don't send war literature. The wounded like best of all a good love story. The young men, especially, are rather tired of hearing of about the war. It is better to tell them, too, that they should have a love story of that sort."

PROBATION SYSTEM IN JUVENILE CASES PRAISED BY JUDGE

Judge H. L. Maxfield Shows Where Better Results Are Obtained by Paroling Minor Court Offenders.

Judge H. L. Maxfield this morning confirmed the report sent out by state court officers that the probation system is a most efficient method in dealing with youthful court offenders and that this system is superior to the older and harsher method of imprisonment and confinement.

The practice of paroling juvenile offenders has been growing in the state and was adopted with a few exceptions by Judge Maxfield during his administration of the municipal court bench.

"Keeping the young men out of the reformatories by means of the probation system is the most efficient method in dealing with youthful court offenders and that this system is superior to the older and harsher method of imprisonment and confinement."

On the other hand, you have a youth that has become a hardened thief and I believe to some degree by instinct it is necessary to impose upon him a punishment in a penal institution where he learns discipline through confinement, training and instruction. To show a first offender to the state reformatory, without any rules and stigma, and cast upon conditions which govern his actions somewhat, should have the money of the court to "make good" under the probation system.

"On the other hand, you have a youth that has become a hardened thief and I believe to some degree by instinct it is necessary to impose upon him a punishment in a penal institution where he learns discipline through confinement, training and instruction. To show a first offender to the state reformatory, without any rules and stigma, and cast upon conditions which govern his actions somewhat, should have the money of the court to 'make good' under the probation system."

The system of probation under the state board of control means that commitment papers are issued against the convicted person and sent with the evidence and testimony taken before court to the institution where the youth was sentenced. An officer, known as the field officer, instructs the prisoner, carefully giving instructions as to the rules he is to follow and each month the paroled person must submit a written report to the state board of control, who keep close track of the young man. The person without youth is paroled out, must also submit a report each month, relating to the conduct of boy or girl, the work done, making money, etc., and if in the hands of the board. At intervals the field officer visits the paroled person and in case of a violation of the rules, during any time of the parole, the prisoner is committed to the institution he was originally sentenced to, no matter if the violation was but a day before his term was up, and the full sentence must be served.

Before the parolment, the probation officer makes an investigation of the crime record, home conditions and environment of the prisoner in order to determine why the offense was committed and the most proper place the youth should be paroled out to. Everything that tends to have bearing on the prisoner is carefully recorded and during his parole his conduct is most closely watched, insuring that the virtue discipline will enter into punishment.

There have been six cases of juveniles being paroled out by Judge Maxfield, an investigation showing that all are making good their opportunities to reform in a suitable working place. Whenever necessary, Judge Maxfield aims to have the best of the juvenile offenders corrected, and to require regular church and school attendance.

Since statistics obtained from penal institutions show that in the most number of cases, criminals form that notorious habits at an early age, the probation problem is timely and his fair to accomplish a good result over the old methods.

CAPTAIN TELLS HOW GERMANS SUNK SHIP

Officers of British Steamer, Sunk by German Cruiser Off Coast of Chile, Arrives in New York.

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Jan. 8.—Details of the sinking of the British steamer Charcoal off the coast of Chile by the German cruiser Prinzess Alice, formerly a North German Lloyd steamer, were brought to New York today by the Charcoal's captain, A. C. Norris, who was passengers aboard the steamer Carillo.

Captain Norris said that the Charcoal was overtaken in foggy weather, eight miles from the Chilean coast. A light from the cruiser caused the crew to open the sea cocks. Then from a distance of a mile the cruiser fired seven explosive shells into the steamer's hull. Prinzess Alice, Capt. Norris said, was fitted with four inch guns and machine guns.

SEARCH FOR NEGRO WHO ATTACKED GIRL

Comparative Goodness.

"Better" is a sweet, comforting little word, I think—a modest, unassuming little word that means a great deal more than she seems to express. She stands in line with her two sisters, Good and Best. I remember that in grammar school it was hard for me to learn that better came after good. I always wanted to say gooder and goodest. After I got used to the comparison, however, it was moderately easy for me, and I always liked the middle term more than the rest. It is so easy and no more than you should be to be good, and it is so hard, and somehow so snobbish, to be best. Better seems commendable and easy to reach and rather satisfactory.—The Christian Herald.

ROMAN CUSTOMS TO BE PORTRAYED BY LATIN SOCIETY

Under instruction of Miss Donnelly, Latin Classes Will Present Difficult Program Saturday Night.

After weeks of careful preparation and study, the Latin society of the Janesville high school are to present on Saturday evening in the school gymnasium, a most difficult program and entertainment, which will be no less than an impersonation of Roman life and customs as it really was centuries ago.

The work is being prepared by the Latin students through the aid and supervision of Miss Donnelly, the Latin instructor. The large gymnasium will resemble the interior of an old Roman building, with many pieces of statuary, large and small, placed at different spots in the hall. Within the hall, will be clad close to one hundred and fifty people in Roman costumes, which were in vogue in the historic days.

A long program, in which many Latin students are to take part, has been arranged, and will be most interesting. The members of the Latin society and high school faculty will comprise the majority of the persons attending. W. S. Jeffris and J. T. Hooper of this city will also be on the program, which will be rendered in the following Latin.

Word was received in this city today of the death of Mrs. James Finley, at her home in the town of Beloit, on Thursday night, following an illness of two years from a complication of diseases. The Evening Chit-Chat

ONE ROAD TO CONTENTMENT.

"An ill favored thing, sir, but mine own."—As You Like It.
What a glimmer of hope does cast over the humblest object!
A neighbor of mine who has long planned to build a home which was to contain many unusually attractive features has finally bought a house which she was able to get at a great bargain.

It is not at all the sort of thing she planned, and when I saw it I thought how disappointed she must be. I expressed my sympathy with her disappointment to a mutual friend who had visited her in her new home and she promptly retorted:

"But she isn't the least bit disappointed. She's the kind of person who takes what she can get and likes it because it's hers."

A Practical Way to be Happy.
And when I also visited her I found it true.

Having a thing because it's yours is a very practical way to be happy.

Of if you cannot actually obtain happiness by it (as this woman certainly could) you can at least accomplish the next best thing—you can convince others that you are happy.

A very pretty, talented girl of whom better things were expected, married a distinctly commonplace man. At least that was what everyone thought at the time.

Throwing Them Off the Scent.
Now they no longer know what to think. For his wife never misses an opportunity to tell people how clever he is. Eventually she will probably succeed in convincing people that she did make a brilliant match after all.

praising and admire anybody on whom the lustre of one's patronage falls is another form of this determined self-satisfaction. I know a woman who, because of her reduced means, was obliged to patronize a cheap tailor. Instead of keeping silent about this fact or appearing to regret it, she at once began to praise him to the skies. She was always saying how smooth his lines were, how beautifully he finished things and what surprising good taste he had. The result was both amusing and pathetic in that she made him so popular that he went on in his prices and she could no longer afford to patronize him. She is now equally enthusiastic about another tailor who has the distinction of her patronage.

After all, such satisfaction even if it springs from no noble source, is better than the dissatisfaction of the type of person who is never satisfied with anything.

If you can't get what you like, then learn to like what you can get is a very practical philosophy. And even if you only pretend to like it at first, this pretense is apt to react on your real feelings and make you more content than you would otherwise be.

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"You look tired tonight, mother," said Agnes Forrest, seating herself by the table with her mending basket.

"I am tired, dear; tired of doing nothing," replied the alert woman of fifty-five.

"You are busy every moment of the day," laughed the daughter.

"It is positively pitiful, in a world where people are staggering under impossible loads, to sit here and never lend a hand," continued the older woman without noticing the remark.

"But, mother," said the placid daughter, "it is good to see you able to take it easy; you have worked hard all your life. It is the greatest joy I have the thought that the hard days are over for you."

"The idea of two women putting about doing the little dab of work in this convenient little flat! It is too selfish a life to be borne," she leaned forward to thread her needle in the strong light. "My dear Agnes, we are a nation of wasters. We have wasted our forests and now we must begin to plant trees; we have wasted our babies with needless mortality; we have wasted our youths with tuberculosis, and one great waste is the powers of women between forty and seventy years of age. These women who are well, with their experience, should be capable of doing useful work in the world. They are relegated to a room or a shop where their powers shrivel through disuse."

"What could you do, mother?" questioned the daughter.

"What set me to thinking was not find a suitable matron for the Working Girl's Home, one who understands young people and could mother those girls, who are making a brave fight to earn a living. That would be doing something worth while, if one could get the confidence of two dozen girls, and perhaps be able to lend a hand in a crisis in their lives. How I would enjoy helping them get up entertainments! It would be possible to have the girls give plays," said Agnes, beginning to enthuse.

"I think it could be arranged to have the dramatic club invite them to the last rehearsal. The fact of having an audience makes rehearsal so much better, and it would be a great pleasure for them. Then I could invite different musical friends down to play for them," continued Mrs. Weeks.

"You are thinking up a number of schemes for entertainment, mother, but the hard part is to keep the girls contented with the board and obedient to house rules," and Mrs. Forrest sat with a stocking drawn over her head, thinking deeply.

"I should try to educate the girls to govern themselves, and have them take turns making out menus for a week," reflected the mother.

"It would be good practice, and stop all complaints about meals," responded Agnes.

"I believe I will apply for the position," said the mother at last.

"I hate to have you leave us, mother," said Agnes.

"Nonsense! I would be right here in town and could see you often. I would have money for all the projects so dear to my heart," answered Mrs. Weeks.

"Indeed, that would add greatly to your happiness," agreed the daughter. "I'll go with you to see about it."

How Linoleum Kills Germs.
German scientists have discovered that disease germs quickly die when they come in contact with the ordinary floor covering known as linoleum. This is thought to be due to the disinfectant properties of linoleum oil which is found in linoleum in large quantities.

WATCH STAGE GOWNS FOR LATE FASHIONS

Vital Secret of the Play, Declares Margaret Mason, Woman's the Gowns Worn.
(By Margaret Mason.)

When they go forth to see a play the ladies, Heaven bless 'em, don't care a fig about the plot. But just the way they dress 'em.

In Act one when the heroine leaves her husband who's untrue they think her leaving gown too sweet.

Of velvet, sapphire blue, and who's visits Ormond de's flat. At midnight all alone, Her Russian suit and sable hat. To them all dies in Act the last.

They think just simply grand Her negligence of cloth of gold. It always gets a hand.

New York, Jan. 8.—It really matters not these days whether a drama is played in the theatre or on the screen, the real vital secret of its success is if it is played in two evening gowns, a street costume and a negligee. The glass of fashion is the opera glass and followers of fashion get their latest hints from behind the footlights.

Among the most striking creations shown on the New York stage this winter have been the wonderful copy to poor war victims deprived of their Paris models one that has proved a swooning success and been fairly pounded upon is worn by Miss Doran in the last act of "The Hawk." It is an afternoon toilette of black Chantilly lace over black tulle and the short underskirt of the gown finished with a fringe of jet. A single of the jet bands twists around the waist twice and finishes in front with two long tasselled ends. Worn over this lace gown is a loose hip length sleeveless coat of black velvet bordered in white with the long Chantilly sleeves of the dress add a little complement. A sable muff and a smart little jet and sable turban completes the costume.

"The dramatic life of Madame Nashova's new play 'That Sort' was short lived but the memory of her striking costumes will not soon be forgotten. One a house gown of sombre black velvet, loose and straight of line from the long tight sleeves and the high tight collar buttoned severely and closely down the middle of the front to the waist and the bust open as if it had been split up in the middle of a skirt to turn back its gay futuristic silk lining and reveal a frothy lace flowered petticoat of white.

In "The Song of Songs" Irene Fenwick clothes herself in the justly famed restaurant supper act in an adorably simple but daring frock of silver embroidered lace and cloth of silver. It is a made sand bodice and sleeves save for a bit of white illusion over each shoulder. The loose straight lined swath of cloth of silver which reaches from the bust straight down to the hip has a severely effect by a few falls of heavily embroidered silver lace which from the short ankle length skirt. It is fantastic from the long white and fluffy skirt down and the quinquessence of worldly sophistication from its long waist up to its lack of corsage.

The lilac domino that Eleanor Painter wears in the opera of the same sartorial name is delightfully appropriate for a negligee. It is of soft lilac lined chiffon with loose flowing angle sleeves the short skirt draped up in scallops over a lace petticoat and finished with a double ruching of the chiffon bedecked with tiny chiffon roses. The same ruching finishes it up the front and around the low V shaped neck.

In "Watch Your Step" among a perfect swarm of attractive original frocks a Persian effect of mauve, blue and green chiffons flecked with a bit of barbaric gold embroidery were seen there and a bright blue gown heavily with gold fringe is worn by Mrs. Castle with a realistic swathing Persian turban of the peacock blue chiffons topped with a spray of Paradise feather to rival even a Pasha's head-covering.

Snow-Proof Boots.

Members of arctic expeditions have found that guni boots are not proof against the entrance of moisture for snow water seems to penetrate the rubber where the boots are in more or less constant use for a long period of time. This is prevented by an occasional application of shoeing, which effectively keeps the moisture out, even when subjected to the hardest wear. Shoeing can also be made use of to advantage in coating the thongs of snow shoes for the purpose of resisting the moisture when moving over the wet snow. The shoes thus treated enable the men to make much better headway over the snow with less effort. The thongs which have been treated with shoeing are also said to dry out quicker after use than others.

THE MASTER KEY

By John Fleming Wilson

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT FOR THIS PAPER. BY ARRANGEMENT MADE WITH THE UNIVERSAL FILM MANUFACTURING CO.

Ruth's property was in peril. John's stentorian voice rang out across the throng: "Stop, men! Stop!" But he soon saw that the crowd was getting out of hand. He perceived three or four of the tunnel men racing down the hill to join in the fracas. One of them, he was sure, had been to the powder house. He gritted his teeth and made his last appeal.

"Ruth—Ruth Gallon!" he called. Doubtless none of the miners had noticed her presence, and when her slender figure emerged from a doorway, boldly yet modestly toward the man who was trying to hold them in check, there was a dead silence. That silence was portentous. In it was decided the fate of "The Master Key."

It was broken by wild and tumultuous cheers as John lifted Ruth on the box, and she held out her slender arms in girlish entreaty to the men who knew so well.

Cowed, yet as ever alert to snatch at any opening, Wilkerson now came boldly on the scene. Just as he had bluffed his way many a time before, he now made a play on which he knew his own safety depended. He mounted on the box beside Ruth. "Miss Gallon has asked me to restore the former rate of wages!" he shouted. "It has been done."

What meant that ominous silence? What more must he say to those faces upturned to his? And I have repudiated John Dorr to run this mine," he muttered.

Possibly he hoped that those low, hoarse tones would not carry far, but attentive ears caught them up and knew their meaning.

Old Tom Kane came through the crowd, thrust Wilkerson off the box without ceremony and raised his craft.

"Stop, men, stop!"

ed voice in a yell that brought a perfect thunder of cheers from the miners. Without waiting to listen for more Wilkerson went away with as much bravado as he could muster to the office.

On his way he picked up his gun, which John had hung through the window, and thrust it in the bosom of his shirt, with a meaning glance backward at John Dorr, who was now being Ruth through the crowds toward the bungalow, followed by a yelling, tramping, laughing, howling column of men.

Once inside the office Wilkerson went to his desk and unlocked the drawer which held that seventh letter. "Some time"—he muttered meaningly.

CHAPTER VII.

Wilkerson the Plotter.

WHEN he had thoroughly learned his lesson Wilkerson coolly, in spite of the letter he had received from John Dorr, in New York, telling him of her willingness to finance her scheme, determined he must be friends with John Dorr, at least outwardly. So he smoothed out the visible wrinkles in his face, trying to veil the malicious gleam in his eyes, and spent two days quietly trying to show his amiability, not only to the miners, but to Dorr himself.

Wilkerson was absolutely certain that his old partner, Thomas Gallon, had really made a rich find and that he had lost the location and accepted "The Master Key" as a substitute.

the hope that by working it thoroughly he might end the matter. In other words, careful manipulation of the present mine, painstaking toil in digging out the trend of the various veins, would lead to that particular pot of gold which had been at the end of Gallon's youthful rainbow of hopes. Wilkerson was determined to be master of "The Master Key." He needed the skilled aid of John Dorr with his engineering knowledge.

"Look here, Wilkerson, maybe both of us have made a mistake."

John Dorr knew that there was a tremendous secret in Gallon's life represented by the golden key which he had torn from his neck and handed to Ruth when he was dying. That key had figured on it. He understood that these scratches on that golden surface represented something tremendously important, and that the old man had committed Ruth to his charge and had spoken of Wilkerson as his former partner and said, "Wilkerson knows."

What was it that Wilkerson knew? It was better, thought John, to accept his amiable advances and thereby possibly gain his confidence and find out for Ruth's sake that secret which Thomas Gallon had taken to his grave.

So on the second day after the restoration of the old scale of wages and his own reappointment as engineer in charge John went down to the office and said bluntly: "Look here, Wilkerson, maybe both of us have made a mistake. I'm sure my only aim is to help out in the promotion of 'The Master Key.'"

Wilkerson received him amiably. "I'm sure my only interest in this business is to fetch into good ore. All that we are digging out now is dirt without any pay to it."

"I think I know where we can strike first class stuff," Dorr returned. "There is sure pay rock if we travel south from that main tunnel. We may have to go a couple of hundred feet."

Wilkerson looked at him shrewdly. "That will cost money," he remarked. "But I'll take this up with Ruth."

John looked at him with a faint trace of the old gamy in his eyes. He did not like to hear the first name of the mistress of "The Master Key" on these lips.

"If the mine is not paying it's up to us to make it pay," he remarked. When Wilkerson entered the bungalow Ruth perceived a great change in his attitude. He was no longer sullen, and he was evidently worried. It was a clean worry, and she smiled at him. Had not her father come in with that expression on his face many times? She put her chin in the cup of her hands and asked cheerfully, "What is it, Mr. Wilkerson?"

"May I sit down?" he said awkwardly.

She motioned to a chair, and he pulled out of his pocket a paper covered with figures.

"I think you ought to know how things are going along, Miss Gallon," he said, with unusual formality. "When your father made me superintendent of this mine I did not realize that the responsibility was so heavy as it is. We are not making any money. We are losing money. You can see by the reports which I have here that our cleanup lately has been far less than our expenses, and our last one showed practically nothing. We must find the vein again. To do so we must have money. There is no money in 'The Master Key' mine."

"That's what father used to say sometimes," said Ruth quietly. "But he always got it."

"Wilkerson flushed." "Miss Gallon, I hope that you don't think that I'm not doing my best. I am, John Dorr and I have gone over this matter together. He agrees with me that we have absolutely lost the vein and that if 'The Master Key' is to pay anything more we must find it again."

Ruth's expression softened at the mention of John Dorr's name. "What does he think?" she demanded. "What is the chance of finding it again?"

"If we run west, Dorr thinks," said Wilkerson slowly, "we'll recover the vein, but that will cost money, which we haven't got. Do you realize, Miss Gallon, that the pay roll here is over $1,000 a day? Within a week I have to pay out over $30,000 for the month, and I tell you frankly that when I have paid that there will be no more money to the account of 'The Master Key' in the bank in Silent Valley."

Ruth realized that he was speaking the truth, even lessening the immediate danger of the catastrophe, but her distance of the man was too great to allow her to discuss the matter with him in the intimate way which she felt was necessary. She must see John Dorr.

She quickly dismissed Wilkerson and then went to Dorr's office, meeting him at the door. She bore as a gift a small basket of fruit. Without preliminaries she said, "John, are we broke?"

He laughed; then his face grew grave. "The mine is not paying," he said briefly.

"But can't we make it pay? What is the matter?"

"Money," said John. "It will cost $10,000 to drive that new tunnel. John added as they entered the office.

"But Mr. Wilkerson just said he was going to pay over $30,000 to the men," Ruth said soberly. "If we have that much money, why can't we?"

A tenderness flooded Dorr's eyes. He comprehended her helplessness, understood why old Thomas Gallon had been so insistent that he, John Dorr, should look after her. She was a mere child. He tried to explain the exact situation, with the result that Ruth finally pushed him off his high stool, got up on it herself and wrote in a large, childish hand right across the face of one of his new drawings, "I must raise $10,000!"

"John, are we broke?"

She swung around to John and asked, "How can I get $10,000?"

Dorr hesitated. His plan was risky in view of Wilkerson's attitude, but after all, the money must be raised. He said quietly, "Pledge the stock you own in 'The Master Key.' I know a man in New York who will loan you $10,000 on it." He bent over her earnestly. "But listen, Ruth. If we spend the $10,000 and we don't find the mother lode, you lose the mine. It's just like a mortgage on a farm."

"But you wouldn't suggest this if it weren't the only way out," she said briefly. "Now, how am I to do this?"

"You must go to New York and see George Everett. I will give you a letter to him, and he will see to it that you get the extra money we need."

Meanwhile I'll keep the mine going." Ruth gave him her full eyes. "You don't like Mr. Wilkerson, do you?"

"I don't trust him," he replied. At this moment the superintendent entered the office and, seeing their two heads close together over the desk, he crowded. "I came to see what we are going to do about that new tunnel," he said roughly. "I don't like to start in anything I can't finish."

Ruth swung around to say quietly: "I am going to New York city to see Mr. George Everett, a friend of Mr. Dorr's, and I will come back with the $10,000."

"Everett, Everett!"—repeated Wilkerson, "who is George Everett?"

Despite John's frown, Ruth volubly explained. When she had finished Wilkerson nodded and said: "I'll put the men to work tomorrow, Dorr. Better have your plans ready!" He stamped out.

"You had better go this afternoon," John told Ruth. "There is no time to lose."

"CABIRIA"

Novellation of D'Annunzio's Spectacular Photoplay.

In the giant temple of Moloch, with its entrance between the idols, stone hands, stood a furnace of white heat—a furnace in the shape of Moloch. Into the blazing heart of this furnace were cast the fairest little children to be found in all Carthage.

Seeking such children, Karthalo one day strode through the slave market. There his snarling gaze chanced to fall upon Cabiria, clasped to her nurse's breast. Karthalo bought the child, and next day bore her to the temple of Moloch to feed the fire demon his people worshipped.

The nurse, Croessa, followed her adored little charge to the temple, shrieking to the priests to spare the child. It was a demand for mercy to the merciless. Karthalo passed on with the victim, and, for interfering in the holy rites, Croessa was hanged.

Sore of body, broken of heart, the desperate woman fled through the streets—streets that were deserted, because all Carthage was at the temple, viewing the sacrifice ceremony. As she stumbled along, blind with weeping, Croessa almost collided with two cloaked figures. She heard one of them speak. The voice was the voice of a Roman. And she stopped to stare at the people, who evidently from Rome, dared venture into their enemy's capital.

The man who had spoken was a gentle patrician, despite his ragged disguise. His companion was an Ethiopian, a giant of unbelievable stature and strength. The patrician was Fulvius Axilla, a Roman officer, who had volunteered to risk his life by coming to Carthage as a spy. The giant Ethiopian was Maciste, his slave. Croessa rushed up to Fulvius and treating him to rescue the doomed Cabiria. She thrust upon him a strangely engraved ring she had saved from the love of her boy, a talismanic loop, bearing the inscription:

"Save and you shall be saved." Fulvius, touched by her pleadings consented to undertake the child's rescue. His life was, in any event, forfeit, should he be captured in Carthage. And the thought of a helpless child—a Roman child—being cast into those devouring, pers furnace was more than his tender heart could bear.

Guided by Croessa he and Maciste made their way to the temple. Maciste striding ahead, through the hands—guarded mouth of the shrine, thrust the worshippers aside like so many children and made a way for his mistress toward the glowing furnace at the far end of the temple.

Karthalo, the crying Cabiria in his arms, was standing in front of the white-hot idol. He chanted a prayer for Hannibal's victory over the Romans. The worshippers swelled the chant to a roar like the howling of hungry beasts. Then stepping forward Karthalo swung open the door in the chest of the idol-shaped furnace. Out gushed a blast of heat that singed the little girl's faxen curls. High in air Karthalo poised Cabiria preparatory to casting her into the flames.

At the same instant Karthalo was hurled senseless to the ground. Two men, one a black giant, the other a Roman patrician, came for an instant above him. Then they seized the baby and dashed through the stupefied throng, through the temple and into the street.

OFFICE SEEKERS SHY AT CORONER IN ROCK COUNTY

Job No Inducement to Politicians—
Position Carries Jurisdiction
Over Sheriff.

Although quite a number of votes were cast at the last election for the office of Rock county coroner, the nominee failed to qualify, and similar to years past, Rock county has no coroner.

Despite this some people do not take the office of coroner seriously. Many are of the opinion that his duties are limited to the investigation of violent deaths and conducting inquests. And among those that do not know are many more who have yet to realize that the coroner in cases of emergency is the highest officer in the county and can, upon just reasons, arrest and imprison or demand the resignation of the sheriff.

Rock county politicians fight shy of this office because the remuneration is insignificant considering the small number of cases which he would be summoned to preside. In some counties of the state, however, the coroner is paid an annual salary, while in others he is given four dollars per day for each day's service. There is no salary for the coroner in Rock county, but he is required by the state to bond for five hundred dollars and the proverbial oath of office.

Should a case arise in this county where a coroner would be called, the district attorney is notified. He takes the evidence of the case, and providing an inquest is deemed necessary the district attorney directs a justice of the peace to preside.

According to law the jury for the inquest should be drawn from the jury list of the circuit court. Twelve names are drawn by the clerk, and six of them must be summoned by an officer. If for any reason six men can not be secured from the list of twelve, the officer must get more names from the jury list.

Without permission from the district attorney no inquest can be held. In the case of violent death the coroner first makes investigation and then notifies the district attorney. The evidence submitted is for the latter to determine whether or not the facts at hand warrant the inquiry.

The duties of coroner are manifold in cases of emergency. If a county is without sheriff or undersheriff it is the duty of the coroner to exercise all powers and duties of the office until a sheriff is elected, appointed or qualified. Whenever the sheriff shall be committed to jail for any cause the coroner must be the keeper of the jail during the time the sheriff is a prisoner.

The coroner shall serve and execute processes of every kind and perform all other duties of the office when so ordered by the court. When the coroner is in the performance of these duties and requirements the coroner is allowed the same fees as would ordinarily go to the sheriff.

For continuing the sheriff on a civil process the sheriff must pay the coroner 50 cents each day before he is entitled to be discharged, unless a court orders otherwise. If, in connection with a civil case, the coroner is called upon to act as a juror, an affidavit is filed charging that the sheriff will not faithfully perform his duty on some action or case because of partiality, prejudice or personal interest. In the event the clerk of the court shall address the original or other process in the action to the coroner. The latter shall exercise the same powers and proceed in the same manner as the sheriff.

Among other things the coroner also predominates. He is also an ex-officio deputy game and fish warden; is directed by law to suppress riots and unlawful assemblies in the county and to suppress the same if he has knowledge that liquor is being sold to Indians he is to make complaint against the violator of the law.

Only the governor may remove the coroner for cause and the latter hearing. The governor shall also appoint if a vacancy exists in the office. Although the law relating to the drawing of coroner's jury was invalid, it was not expunged out of existence by the legislature. The names of all jurymen who served at inquests since then have been drawn from the regular jury list in the circuit court.

The drawing of the law in the 1913 statutes was discovered by the Dane county coroner and he immediately took the matter up with the clerk of the circuit court. The latter also sought for the law but in vain. In the meantime the clerk of the circuit court discovered that the law had not appeared on the statute books for the past two years.

In 1909 the legislature passed a law whereby all judges, judges of probate, commissioners of the names of all persons summoned for jury duty at coroner's inquests had to be drawn from the regular jury list in the circuit court. In accordance with this law the clerk of the circuit court drew the names of the jury from the list of names from the clerk of the court. They took the names of twelve men and summoned six of them for the jury. The jurors were selected only from the locality in which the inquest was held.

When the district attorney of the state met two years ago they decided to recommend to the legislature a change in the law because it was in conflict with other jury laws. A bill was drawn but was not satisfactory to the judiciary committee of the assembly. The question arose as to whether it was advisable to draw the names of jurors residing in various parts of the county in view of the large distances they would be compelled to travel to attend the inquests. Jurors at coroner's inquests draw $1 a day for their services and receive a cent for each mile actually traveled.

It was then proposed that a bill be drafted compelling coroner's jury to be drawn from the regular jury box in the circuit court. The city of Milwaukee complained the greater part of the county and it was considered that the law would be satisfactory for that locality. After the bill had been drawn the committee on the judiciary committee of the assembly. ROCK RIVER CARP DIE BY THOUSANDS IN THIS VICINITY

Cause Has Not Been Explained Yet—
Dead Fish Sold Locally—Buck-master Gives Warning.

An epidemic, unexplainable as yet, is taking the lives of thousands of carp in Rock river in this vicinity. No other fish thus far have been harmed to any extent as far as known. The news is highly favorable to fishermen, who gladly invite the extermination of the cause.

The thousands of dead fish have been the cause of no end of trouble at the power houses at the upper dam and at Monterey and Fulton and Indian Ford for the past three weeks. It is planned to call the attention of the state fish commission to the trouble.

As many as ninety huge members of the finny tribe have been removed in a single day from between the gates and the power house at the electric company's upper plant. Hundreds can be seen drawn against the water wheels of the Blodgett Milling Company in the raceway. At the upper railway bridges they are collected against the ice and piers in large numbers.

The excess has opened a source of revenue for a number of local people until the health department learned that the dead fish were being dressed and sold and their species misrepresented. Partakers of many of the proverbial free lunches at the Blodgett Milling Company in the raceway. At the upper railway bridges they are collected against the ice and piers in large numbers.

Dr. Buckmaster, city health officer, issued a warning this morning to housewives against buying the fish from peddlers. The seat of trouble may prove serious.

The fish secured thus far have three peculiar and distinct markings which are indicative of trouble among the carp species. The white bottom of the body is crimson red, a prominent flushing flow of blood to the surface; the eyes protrude far out from the sockets and the scales, ordinarily lying close to the body, are loose and tend to extend outward.

A local man, said to be the most expert in the judging of fish on the river, opened one. The stomach and intestines were covered with a black, slimy substance which ordinarily is not present.

The Janesville Hide and Leather Company during the past week has conducted experiments in attempting to secure the oil from the dead bodies taken from the river. Little practical results have been secured, as thus far but about twenty-five pounds of oil has been secured per ton of fish treated.

Another serious trouble which may be experienced from the presence of the fish in the river will arise in the spring unless some means are taken at present to clear the river of the dead bodies. This will perhaps be the most noticeable along the shores and in the raceways here. The decaying bodies will prove a menace to health and may be the means of causing the exterminating a large number of the game fish.

No one thus far has any explanation of the manner in which the fish came to their death. That the carp fishing, which has been going above the city for several months past, has nothing whatever to do with the present trouble is seen when it is known that the electric plants at Fulton and at Indian Ford have reported similar occurrences. It was thought likely at first that a portion of the fish caught in the crisis of the carp fishers had gotten away, but the signs on the bodies of the fish have been above the city for several months past.

Near Oregon, on Rock river, a short distance south of Rockford, the Illinois fish commission is conducting an inquiry into the death of many fish. The bodies of the fish have been above the city for several months past. It is said that there have been many manufacturing plants which of late have been reported similar occurrences. It was thought likely at first that a portion of the fish caught in the crisis of the carp fishers had gotten away, but the signs on the bodies of the fish have been above the city for several months past.

Between here and Lake Koshkonong there is a factory of manufacturing plants which could cause a similar condition among the fish.

FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Jan. 8, 1875.—Lively times in the coal and wood yards. Travel has been good for several days. The thermometer is rising; so is the wind; look out for squalls. Twenty-three degrees warmer this morning than yesterday and yet it pinches.

The shoe factory folks have taken an order from A. P. Lovejoy to manufacture a pair of ladies' shoes. They will be an interesting pair when finished.

Mr. Sutherland says that the young people laugh at the idea that the Gazette is appointed as one of the vice presidents of the state "horticultural" society. It is the Historical society which he honors with a vice presidency.

A young country fellow went into Smith and Bostwick's store yesterday to purchase a piece of calico, or something of that sort, and seeing an open barrel near the counter containing what he supposed were fine russet apples, took one and stuck his teeth into it. He was astonished to find that it was a beer barrel.

The southbound Northwestern freight struck a rut south of Afton yesterday near the big bridge and five cars, three of bulk wheat, one of hides and one of flour went into the ditch. This is the same place it will be remembered, that a similar accident occurred about this time last year.

S. J. M. Putnam is out of jail, vacated for Fisher, and is now comfortably occupying his fine residence in the third ward. A. J. Boyce has been turned over to the register officer to Charles Valentine.

Mrs. Richardson has made a petition to the common council to look into the condition of the street on her property on Main street. She is a taxpayer who cheerfully comes across every time and she also wishes to know if Ald. Church's pocketbook is a common receptacle for all such similar petitions. Now, Mr. Church, stand up and explain.

Free Library and Reading Room. In response to a call from the Ladies' Temperance Union a goodly number of women met yesterday afternoon in room 2 in the Mitchell block, to devise ways and means for opening a free library and reading room, and if possible, lunch rooms for the citizens of Janesville. A committee was appointed to wait on the citizens of Janesville for subscriptions to make a free library and waiting room of one of the institutions of our growing and industrious city.

The Shoe Boys: The Parker brothers are busily engaged in putting up the machinery at the shoe factory. They are lively about the building and one is convinced that the manufacture of shoes will commence within a few days. It will probably be today, says the boys before they are able to make shoes. Nineteen hands have arrived from North Adams. They are skilled workmen who have been in the employ of the Parkers for several years.

With the present machinery they will be able to turn out between four and five hundred pairs of shoes per day. They have had many years of experience in the business and are masters of their respective lines. We hope that they will more than realize their expectations.

R. Richardson has a communication today. It is about the proposed new fire bell. He says that we should at least have a 2,000 pound bell, but since they have no money, they need a fire bell and we need it badly. We had better heed Richardson's proposition and purchase a chime that can be heard all over the city.

"years," corrected Winnie sternly. Since I was 16."

"Really!" said the widower in astonishment. "I fancied—I imagined—I was quite under the impression, in fact, that I had known you much longer."

"Well, you haven't," said Winnie. "And I should think that's quite long enough."

"Quite," he agreed, "for the purpose. And 'Winnie' has always struck me as being the very prettiest name a girl could have—Winnie."

"I didn't say you could!" she exclaimed.

"I have a wonderful way of taking things for granted," explained the widower airily. "But, do you know, it just occurred to me—while you were talking and while you were showing me what a beautiful thing marriage might be with a sweet girl (who wasn't a vegetarian)—it just occurred to me that I was most fortunately fond of you—"

"No," said Winnie, rising. "There's the next dance beginning, and I—"

"Sit down," said the widower, placing a detaining hand on her arm. "Never mind the next dance. What do you think I came here for tonight? I didn't come to dance. I came to see you. I have been waiting to see you for—for months; but they told me you were engaged, and I kept away."

"I—I broke it off," she murmured, looking down.

"Was—was he a vegetarian?" asked the widower anxiously.

Winnie raised her eyes to his, and her cheeks turned suddenly crimson.

"No, but I—I—"

The widower gave a little triumphant laugh.

"My darling," he whispered in her ear, "we can make it up to each other all the rest of our lives!"

Patience Winslow has the distinction of being the only female colored in an American colony. The "Mistake Book of Asia" on this is correct, but makes no mention of her and was published before she was married in Hawaii. Her place in the colony has been both pathetic and exceptional. She entered it with her husband and then their children were killed.
